

TOO INTO
you

I think someone shared intimate images of me.

What do I do?

If someone shares, or even threatens to share, explicit images or videos of you without your permission, this is image based sexual abuse and it is a crime.

TOO
you

It's still a crime even if you:

- Previously sent photos/videos to that person consensually
- Took the photos or videos with them
- Didn't know they were taking photos or videos of you

They are still breaking the law by sharing or threatening to share them without your consent.

I think this has happened to me. What do I do?

You might feel anxious and worried about what to do. You can chat to us about it at toointoyou.ie or call Women's Aid 24Hr National Freephone Helpline on 1800 341 900. Both are free and confidential.

“How do I get images/video shared of me taken down?”

Under the Data Protection Acts 1988-2003, you have the right to ask a website to take down any sensitive content of you. Notify the website or platform immediately by selecting the Report option.

“My ex is blackmailing me and says if I don’t get back with them, they will post nudes they have of me online.”

If you are being blackmailed, if anyone is seeking money from you, or if you feel harassed, you can go to the Gardaí to make a complaint.

What about if I’m under 18?

If you are under 18 in the photos/videos this is considered child sexual abuse and the person who shared it has committed a criminal offence. This can be reported to the Gardaí.

How do I report it?

You can report it confidentially and anonymously at hotline.ie. Hotline can help to report and remove the images/videos online. They can also work with An Garda Síochána, if you would like the Gardaí to investigate your situation.

No one will believe me!

Remember, this is not your fault and no one deserves this. You deserve support. You can find support and information at toointoyou.ie. We will believe you and support you.
